

A photograph of a swampy forest. The foreground is filled with dark, still water that reflects the surrounding trees and branches. The water's surface is covered in ripples, creating a distorted, wavy reflection of the sky and the forest above. In the middle ground, a dense thicket of trees stands. Many of the trees are bare, with thin, dark trunks and branches reaching upwards. Some trees have a few small, green leaves, suggesting early spring. The ground is a mix of dark, muddy earth and fallen branches. The background is a dense wall of trees, with some showing hints of green foliage. The overall atmosphere is quiet and somewhat somber, typical of a swampy environment.

Photos are from Lowndes and Ware
Counties and taken by Vickie Everitte